House Committee Concerned At Extent Of Authority In Reorganization Plan

The broad, new authority asked for by the Secretary of Defense under the Pentagon reorganization plan has met a strong wall of opposition during the first week of hearings before the House Armed Services Committee.

Almost without exception, the fight has centered around the numerous steps which could legally be taken under the proposal, as opposed to the changes actually desired and intended.

Although it is too early to predict the outcome, there is clear evidence the Committee may grant many of the major changes asked by the President, but only after carefully modifying the language of the proposal to safeguard the basic individuality of each of the four Armed Forces.

Here are the points of controversy which have arisen, and the way each is shaping up:

The President has asked that the present numerical limitation on the Joint Staff (210 officers) be lifted, and that the

Tell Promotion Prospects In All Services; Top Star Change; "Best Qualified" Grows

AF NAMES PERMANENT COLONELS, PAGE 23

THE JOURNAL publishes in this issue—Page 11—a summary of promotion prospects in the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps, as revealed to the Stennis Senate Armed Services Subcommittee during action on the pay legislation.

Elsewhere on the promotion front, Secretary of Defense McElroy has ordered new procedures for three and four-star ranks, in accordance with the President's reorganization Plan—Page 3.

The Army has decided to put into effect 1 July the "best qualified" system for temporary and permanent promotions to major—Page 4. There's more on Army permanent promotions on Page 5.

Additional details concerning Air Force promotion plans have come to light with the release this week of closed-door budget testimony—Page 2.

CNO Supports Plan; Opposes Big Staff

Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, Chief of Naval Operations, has told the House Armed Services Committee Congress should write the Pentagon Reorganization Plan in such a way as to prevent some future Secretary of Defense from doing drastic things which are not intended at the moment."

As the plan is now drafted, he said, "it could be interpreted to mean things which the Secretary and the President do not intend it to mean." This is the same position taken by a majority of the Committee's members.

Admiral Burke supported the major provisions of the plan, but testified that he believes the increases in the Joint Staff should be held "to a minimum."

He said, "Should the Joint Chiefs of Staff become involved in the detailed direction of operations and their support, they will not have sufficient time to devote to the important problems of strategic direction, advanced planning, and broad policy."

The CNO told the Committee that if

Marine Corps Makes 13 Uniform Changes

Elimination of aide-de-camp insignia, adoption of stretch socks for enlisted men and creation of branch of service insignia for hospital corpsmen and dental technicians are among 13 changes made by the Marine Corps' Permanent Uniform Board.

Survivor Payments Increased By Senate Bill

Service widows will receive survivor benefit payments up to $337 per month, under the Senate pay bill. The increases, slightly less than those provided by the House, range from about $2 per month for the widows of second lieutenants to $95 per month for the widows of former members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff who died on active duty or of Service-connected causes after retirement.

Pay Raises Take Effect 1 June; President's OK Likely Next Week

Fatter June paychecks were assured for military families this week as House and Senate conferees prepared to thrash out final details of the pay bill.

The Senate passed the measure, 87-0 on 29 April, making it possible for members of the Armed Forces to receive at least $48 million more in extra pay next month, and $576 million during the 12-month period beginning 1 July.

When the measure comes out of conference—with a possible restoration of some of the changes made in the House bill—it will be rushed to the White House for the President's signature. It will become effective 1 June.

Seven Senators and seven Congressmen have been appointed to meet in conference and work out differences in the House and Senate bills which will be acceptable on both sides of the Capitol.

Here is what the Senate bill does:

- Cuts $106 million from the House-passed bill, but provides $65 million more than the White House had indicated it was willing to support.

- Provides "command and responsibility" pay for up to 14,300 officers in pay grades O-3, O-4, O-5 and O-6. This de-

SENATE SCALES — Turn to Page 3 for comprehensive table of pay rates voted by the Senate.

RESPONSIBILITY PAY — There's a good chance House members of the Conference Committee will reject the responsibility pay for officers—up to $150 per month—approved by the Senate. Details are on Page 11.

SURVIVOR BENEFITS — Thousands of Service widows will receive increased survivor benefit payments under the new pay legislation, as reported on Page 27.

RETIRED INCREASE — The Senate action in endorsing the House-passed 6 per cent increase for Retired military persons and a report on six changes affecting Retired is found on Page 27.

RANK PROBLEM — The Services are still studying what to do about titles and insignia for the two new enlisted ranks in the pay bill. Some suggested alternatives are described on Page 28.

Air Force Tells '59 Promotion Plans; Other Highlights From Budget Action

The Air Force has advised a House Appropriations Committee of its officer promotion plans for the year starting 1 July; this year's totals are given in parentheses. There will be 46 advancements to general (52); 320 to colonel (308); 960 to lieutenant colonel (960), and 2000 to major (2100).

No additional forced separations are contemplated for fiscal '59. In order to reach its fiscal '58 officer limit, the Air Force was forced to separate about 2400 Reserve officers.

The pilot training rate will be slashed in half from the fiscal year '57 when 5333 pilots won their wings. Plans for the year starting 1 July call for an output of 2700 pilots.

Senate Reductions Range From Low Of $2 For W-3's To High Of $175 For General

How do pay raises provided by the Senate bill compare with the increases voted by the House?

Here is the answer:

For the Chairman and other members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, both House and Senate rates are the same, $1875 per month.

For other four-star officers, the Senate bill slices away $175 per month. Three-star officers lose $125 per month and two-star officers $100.

All one-star officers with at least 16 years' service would receive $50 more per month under the Senate bill than under the House bill.

Colonels with 22 or more years' service receive a $10 cut.

Lieutenant colonels with 22 or more years' service receive a $20 cut.

Majors with over 10 years' service, less than 16 receive a $10 cut; those with 18 or more years also receive a $10 cut.

Captains with 14 or more years' service receive a $5 cut; those with 12 or more years are reduced $10; those with 10 or more, $20; those with eight or more, $30; and those with four or more and six or more, $5.

First lieutenants with six or more years' service are cut $9, and those with four or more are reduced $7.

Second lieutenants' rates remain the same.

FOR WARRANT OFFICERS, cuts in the W-4 rank range from $5 to $14. W-3 reductions range from $2 to $7, but W-3 in the over-8 category remain the same. W-2 cuts range from $8 to $12, and W-1 cuts range from $10 to $16.

IN THE ENLISTED RANKS, the new E-8 and E-9 grades were reduced $20 per month all along the line. Reductions in the E-7 grade range from $6 to $18. In the E-6 grade, the cuts range from $5 to $10, but no reduction is made for those in the over-18 years' category. The E-5s are reduced in amounts ranging from $3 to $10, but no cut is made for those with over 10 years' service. In the E-4 rank, $10 is cut from those with 10 or more years' service, but all other House-passed pay rates remain the same. No changes were made in E-1, E-2 and E-3.

Secretary McElroy Issues New Rules On All General-Flag Promotions

- Adopts a Pentagon suggestion which will insure authority for the Secretary of Defense to prescribe a uniform defini-

Only 10 percent of the officers in pay grades O-4 through O-6 and five percent of those in pay grade O-3 could receive the new pay. If selected for the pay, colonels and Navy captains would receive an additional $150 per month. Lieutenant colonels and Navy commanders would receive an additional $100 per month. Army, Air Force and Marine Corps captains and majors and Navy lieutenants and lieutenant commanders would receive $50 per month.

The comprehensive coverage on the President's Defense Reorganization Plan—we have given this more space than any other Service publication—will continue.

Further, there must be a statement that "the officer concerned has demonstrated among other qualities, the capacity for dealing objectively—without extreme Service partisanship—with matters of the broadest significance to our national security."

Army Orders "Best Qualified" System For Promotions To Major After 1 July

Effective 1 July the Army will replace the "fully qualified" with the "best qualified" system for permanent and temporary promotion to major, except for Medical, Dental, Nurse and Medical Specialist Corps officers.

The "best qualified" method, used for colonel and above for some time, was extended to temporary and permanent lieutenant colonel, with the exception of Medical and Dental officers, on 1 January.

For permanent promotions below colonel, the lowest selection rate that can be specified by the Secretary of the Army is 80 per cent, which means four-out-of-five chances for selection.

There is no legal limit on the selection rate for temporary promotion.

The Army said the new action is in line with the concept that "promotion is based on potential to perform the duties of higher grades; not a reward for service."

Promotions to captain, both temporary and permanent, will continue on a "fully qualified" basis. Selections to warrant ranks above W-2 are already on a "best qualified" basis.

Major field commanders have authority to promote fully qualified second lieutenants to first lieutenant and Warrant Officers W-1 to Chief Warrant Officer W-2 on completion of 18 months service.

Gen. Cassidy To Korea; Shift Other Brigadiers

Brig. Gen. William F. Cassidy, South Pacific Division Engineer in San Francisco, goes to the Eighth Army in Korea in July. He will be replaced by Brig. Gen. Robert G. MacDonnell, Assistant Commandant of the Ft. Belvoir, Va., Engineering School.

Brig. Gen. John H. Dudley will replace

General MacDonnell after duty as CG of the 18th Engineer Brigade, Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.

General Dudley's replacement will be Col. Robert F. Seedlock, who is attending the National War College.

Brig. Gen. William W. Lapsley becomes Ohio River Division Engineer at Cincinnati in August, replacing Col. Rudolph E. Smyser, Jr., who retires. General Lapsley's successor as Commanding Officer of the Engineer Maintenance Center at Columbus, Ohio, will be Brig. Gen. Bruce D. Rindlaub, CG of the 7th Engineer Brigade of USAREUR.

Also announced was the shift to USAREUR of Brig. Gen. Ralph R. Mace, Deputy CG of the Ft. Chaffee, Ark., Training Center.

Army Association Backs Defense Plan; Hedges On Function Transfer Powers

THE Association of the U. S. Army—60,000 strong—has gone on record as strongly backing most of President Eisenhower's Defense Department reorganization plan.

The AUSA characterizes the plan as a "distinct forward step in the nation's organization for military security and its ability to wage war should war be forced upon us."

Main reservations on the part of AUSA concern provisions which would prevent Service Secretaries from bringing their own recommendations to Congress and which would give the Secretary of Defense the power to "transfer, reassign, abolish or consolidate" Service functions. This latter provision, the Association states, seems excessive in view of the other sweeping powers which have been proposed for the Defense Secretary.

"Careful analysis of these proposals designed to provide for unified strategic planning and firm control of the Nation's operational forces," the Association said, "discloses no reason for believing the Army's philosophy of war would be circumscribed in any degree."

Association officials emphasize that their views do not necessarily reflect the official Army position, if there is such a thing. No AUSA officers or trustees, these officials said, are chosen from the active Army.

Eight Years Old

AUSA was formed in 1950 through the merger of the Infantry and Field Artillery Associations. The Antiaircraft Association joined the group in 1955. At the present time it has 60,000 members in 78 chapters and 44 ROTC companies.

Industrial members include 45 corporations.

Headed by Lt. Gen. Walter L. Weible, USA-Ret., Executive Director, the AUSA's 29-man, full-time staff works diligently to relate factual information on the country's defense needs to the largest possible number of people.

"If we can do this," says Col. Robert F. Cocklin, USA-Ret., the Association's Public Relations Director, "we are confident that we can accomplish most of our objectives, which we sincerely believe are in the best interests of our country."

Urge Million-Man Army

Primary AUSA objectives for 1958 are the maintenance of an active Army of one million men, with a four-division, mobile striking force within the Strategic Reserve. Procurement of long-range airlift, bigger Army missiles and a larger Army part in Air Defense are strongly advocated.

AUSA supported the Cordiner Plan, and has spoken out in favor of provisions to protect military personnel from arbitrary force-outs.

Special emphasis is given to the Association's Industrial Program to develop a closer working relationship between the Army and civilian firms. To this end, the Association supplies information materials and sponsors

Army Seeks Sports Info

The Army wants to know how many men are playing in its organized sports tournaments throughout the world.

To get an accurate count it has prescribed a one-shot report to be submitted by all installation commanders by 30 June. The report should also include, says Circular 28-7, the results which have been obtained in increasing sports participation, the extent to which on-duty sports have been included in the physical conditioning program, and recommendations for improvement of the program.

More Service Seen For Perm. Promotions

Army forecasts made public in connection with testimony on the military pay legislation show a prospective increase of 1½ years in promotion service list time for permanent promotions to brigadier general, colonel and lieutenant colonel.

During fiscal year '57, the following promotion list service was required. The percentage of selections is shown in parentheses:

Brigadier General—26 (7.0)
Colonel—23½ (40.7)
Lieutenant Colonel—18½ (84.9)
Major—14 (91.2)
Captain—7 (97.3)
First Lieutenant—3 (98.0)

The fiscal year '57 statistics show the following years and months service for temporary programs, with the selection rate again indicated in parentheses:

Brigadier General—No selection
Colonel—10-8 (49.8)
Lieutenant Colonel—6-8 (68.9)
Major—6-4 (51.5)

THE ARMY'S H-23D RAVEN: INVESTMENT IN TOMORROW

Over 20 major improvements distinguish the H-23D as one of today's most advanced helicopters. But several features in particular verify its unmatched growth potential, which is a prime requisite for the evaluation of any helicopter investment.

Basic Ruggedness: The H-23D has the highest flight and landing load safety factors of any two or three place helicopter flying today.

Component Life: The H-23D's 250 horsepower is available full-time, without restrictions warning of jeopardized service life. In fact, all existing components are designed to accept considerably greater horsepower and to attain an overhaul period beginning at 1000 hours.

Functional Versatility: More power...more cabin space...further qualify the H-23D as a multi-mission helicopter, backing up a basic Army concept: more utility from fewer units.

The H-23D is now prepared to receive a new 305 horsepower engine, without further major modification. The resulting UH-12E (prototype now flying) has already demonstrated a performance which will capture new missions beyond those previously conceived for this helicopter class.

HOUSE BUTTERS UP NAVY

Butter is a big item in the diet of Sailors and Marines; there is little chance it will be taken off the mess tables any time soon.

The House has refused to approve a bill giving the Sea Services permission to serve oleo to their men. Actually, the House did grant permission, but wrote in a tricky amendment which says the two Services must continue serving the dairy spread as long as surplus butter stocks exist. There is no present end in sight for surplus butter.

Both Services can give their men oleo in overseas areas where it is difficult to keep butter under proper refrigeration.

Although the Navy and Marines are the two smallest Services, they use only slightly less butter and oleo (heavily weighted on the side of butter) than the Army and Air Force.

In 1956, for example, Sailors and Marines ate 14,419,786 pounds of butter and oleo compared with 15,469,189 pounds for the Army and Air Force.

RAdm. J. W. Boundy Heads Navy Supplies

RAdm. James W. Boundy, Director for Supply Management Policy, Office of the Secretary of Defense, has been named to succeed RAdm. Ralph J. Arnold as Paymaster General of the Navy and Chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

Admiral Arnold becomes Commanding Officer, Naval Supply Center, Oakland, Calif.

RAdm. Boundy

Before reporting to OSD, Adm. Boundy was Force Supply Officer on the staff of Commander, Service Force, U. S. Pacific Fleet, with additional duty as Fleet Supply Officer on the staff of Admiral Felix B. Stump, Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Pacific Fleet.

RADM. RALPH K. JAMES, Commander, Long Beach Naval Shipyard, becomes Assistant Chief, Bureau of Ships for Field Activities, in July.

RADM. PHILIP W. SNYDER, Assistant Chief, Bureau of Ships for Shipbuilding and Fleet Maintenance, takes command of the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard in June.

RADM. CLIFFORD S. COOPER, Commander, Carrier Division Six, becomes Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Air, in August. He will be succeeded by RAdm. George W. Anderson, reporting from the Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md.

RADM. JOSEPH N. MURPHY, will be relieved as Bureau of Aeronautics General Representative, Central District, with Headquarters at Wright Patterson AFB, by RADM. CARL J. PFINGSTAG, in June. Admiral Pfingstag is Force Maintenance and Material Officer on the staff of Commander, Naval Air Force, Atlantic Fleet.

Admiral Murphy becomes Commander, Naval Development and Material Center, Johnsville, Pa.

RADM. ARTHUR H. TAYLOR, Naval Attache, London, takes command of Destroyer Flotilla Six in September.

RADM. ALLAN L. REED, Chief of Staff to Commander, U. S. Taiwan Defense Command, reports for an undisclosed assignment in the Office of the CNO in July.

RADM. WILLIAM D. IRVIN, Deputy Director for Communications Electronics, Joint Staff, Joint Chiefs of Staff, assumes command of the Atlantic Fleet's Operational Development Force in September.

Move Supply Flags

The shift of Admiral Arnold has touched off a chain reaction of new assignments for Supply Corps officers.

RADM. LELAND P. KIMBALL, JR., Assistant Chief for Supply Management, Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, becomes Deputy and Assistant Chief of the Bureau.

RADM. WALTER W. HONAKER, Commanding Officer, Naval Supply Depot, San Diego, and District Supply Officer, 11th Naval District, moves to the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts in Washington, D. C.

RADM. HUGH C. HAYNSWORTH, JR., Force Supply Officer, Commander Service Force, Atlantic Fleet, and Fleet Supply Officer on the staff of Commander-in-Chief, Atlantic Fleet, also takes a post in the Bureau.

RADM. JOEL D. PARKS, Commanding Officer, Naval Supply Center, Pearl Harbor, T. H., and District Supply Officer, 14th Naval District, succeeds Admiral Honaker.

RADM. THOMAS L. BECKNELL, JR., Deputy and Assistant Chief of BuSanda, relieves Admiral Parks.

RADM. JOSEPH L. HERLIHY, Commanding Officer, Naval Supply Center, Norfolk, and District Supply Officer, Fifth Naval District, assumes duties as Inspector General, Supply Corps, West Coast.

RADM. CHARLES G. DeKAY, Commanding Officer, Naval Supply Center, Oakland, succeeds Admiral Herlihy.

USMC Kills Aide-de-Camp Shield; Approves EM Stretch Socks; 11 Other Changes

The Marine Corps has made 13 changes in its uniform regulations, including abolishment of the aide-de-camp insignia, approval of new stretch-type socks for enlisted men, and adoption of a branch of service insignia for hospital corpsmen and dental technicians.

Changes which will be incorporated in the next printed revision of Chapter 49 of the Marine Corps Manual include:

1. A STRETCH-TYPE SOCK of blended wool and nylon has been approved for wear by all male enlisted men. Marine Headquarters estimates that procurement of the brown stretch sock will not begin for at least two years because of the large stocks of regular socks on hand. They will, however, be on sale at Marine Corps Exchanges in the near future. Headquarters cautions men who make purchases of the stretch sock to check them for approval identification.

2. A MARINE GUNNER INSIGNIA, identical in size and design with the dress insignia, has been adopted for wear on the shoulder straps of service coats, jackets, overcoats and raincoats of warrant officers. The flare of the bomb will face inboard and parallel to the sides of the shoulder strap. The sphere of the insignia will be located ¼" from the inboard edge of the insignia of rank.

3. THE BRONZE COLLAR DEVICE will be worn on the left collar of the khaki and utility shirts with the insignia of rank on the right collar. The device will be centered, flare of the bomb up, one inch from the front edge of the collar.

3. CUT-OFF DATE for wearing four-piece back service coats is 30 June 1958. The change does not apply to blue and white coats.

4. A NEW LIGHTWEIGHT KHAKI shirting fabric of 65 per cent dacron and 35 per cent cotton has been approved for manufacture of officers' shirts. The cloth has excellent crease-retention qualities, is wrinkle-resistant, is lightweight, and can be either dry cleaned or hand-washed. The authorized material is khaki M-115 shade.

5. THE NEW DISTINGUISHING insignia adopted for wear by hospital corpsmen and dental technicians consists of a shield with a black background with a caduceus in the center. The letter "D" is superimposed on the caduceus to denote men assigned to dental duties. The shield is approximately 1" wide and 1½" high. It is to be worn on the left collar of the shirt, coat, jacket or overcoat.

6. TOP GRADE COWHIDE may be used in the manufacture of visors and chin straps of caps worn by field and company grade officers. Headquarters said this change was made because of the extreme difficulty in obtaining shell cordovan. Cordovan visors may be worn if available.

7. THE BASE OF THE HEEL of Women's Marine pumps will now measure not less than ¾" x ¾", nor more than 1½" x 1½".

8. SERGEANTS MAJOR, 1st sergeants and master sergeants wearing the large, embroidered type rank insignia are required to have them sewn three inches below the shoulder seam. Technical sergeants, and below, will continue to wear grade insignia four inches below the shoulder seam.

9. A REFINISHER for bronzing emblem, tie clasps and buttons has been approved by the Permanent Uniform Board. It is available at Marine Exchanges under the trade name "M-Nu."

10. MEN ENTITLED to the large aviation insignia are required to wear it on the service coat and service jacket. It may not be worn on cloaks, overcoats, topcoats, raincoats, or utility uniforms.

11. IN THE INTEREST OF UNIFORMITY at formation, inspection and parades, utility uniform trousers will be bloused below the top of combat boots. In cases where commands have a mixture of combat boots and field shoes, the trousers will be worn outside the boots.

12. WOMAN MARINES are required to wear, or carry, white gloves at all times with the Summer service uniform when outdoors on leave, liberty, or in transit under orders.

13. AIDE-DE-CAMP INSIGNIA, dress and service, are abolished.

Marine Corps Policy Fixes Extra Pay Rules

Marine Corps Headquarters has issued a new policy statement to standardize payment of extra compensation to enlisted men employed by nonappropriated fund activities.

Headquarters decrees that the following principles be followed:

- No commissioned officer or warrant officer on active duty may receive extra compensation from nonappropriated funds.

- Extra pay may be made to enlisted men only under the following conditions: (1) When EM, not normally assigned to a nonappropriated fund activity, voluntarily perform work outside of regular working hours; and, (2) when men assigned to a nonappropriated fund activity perform work in excess of normal working hours;

- Extra compensation paid to part-time workers will be based on actual work performed while in an off-duty status, and will be computed on an hourly basis;

- Extra pay made to men regularly assigned to nonappropriated fund activities will be computed on an hourly basis for work performed in excess of normal duty hours;

- Such payments will be made only upon the recommendation of and at the rate set by an appropriate council and approved by commanding officers.

Marine Corps Seeks Applications For SDO

The Marine Corps wants applications from permanent unrestricted lieutenant colonels, majors and captains who wish to be redesignated as Supply Duty Officers.

A board will convene 10 June to consider the names of those desiring to specialize.

Temporary commissioned officers holding permanent chief warrant officer, warrant officer or enlisted ranks are not eligible for transfer to the SDO category.

All applications must reach the Commandant of the Marine Corps (Code DF) by 1 June. Applications received after the cut-off date will be considered by the December board.

In order to be eligible for the shift, officers must fall within the zones (in the 1 Jan. 57 Combined Lineal List) shown below:

Rank	Lineal Position
Lt. Col.	Junior to 582, including all majors on promotion list
Maj.	Junior to 1002 and senior to 1803
Capt.	Those on FY '58 Promotion list junior to 419 and senior to 613; junior to 1177, including all lieutenants on promotion list

Close Atlantic City NAS; WAVES Tour Out; Korea War Medals Distributed

NAS ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., will be deactivated 15 June. A farewell ceremony for two departing Fleet squadrons was held 1 May. Air Development Squadron Three, VX-3, led by Capt. Lawrence R. Geis, shifts to NAS Oceana, Virginia Beach, Va., while All Weather Fighter Squadron VF (AW)-4 moves to NAS Quonset Point, R. I., under Cdr. John E. O'Dell, Capt. Michael G. O'Connor commands the Atlantic City Station.

MEDALS FOR ACTIVE DUTY KOREAN WAR veterans are being distributed by the Navy. Distribution of the National Defense Service Ribbon goes to Navy men who were on active duty between 27 June 1950 and 27 July 1954. Those who fought in Korea or served in Korean waters during those dates are eligible for the Korean Service Medal.

THE MINIMUM TOUR for enlisted WAVES has been reduced from four to three years. The Navy reasons a four-year term is too long a period for a young woman to obligate herself when she is undecided as to her future career.

From first page—

the Joint Staff is enlarged too much situations might arise in which the Joint Chiefs would "not be fully informed as to what its staff is doing," or else the staff "might interfere with the duties of the services and of the commanders of the unified and specified commands." The result, he said, could be "confusion of responsibility or derangement of the supporting system."

Admiral Burke also testified that:

• Too large a staff will "write more papers than the Chiefs can study, or will take actions which the Chiefs cannot supervise, or both."

• It may be desirable to provide for at least a three-year period between successive duties on the Joint Staff.

• Methods must be worked out to prevent arbitrary decisions within the Joint Staff, and to prevent senior officers from imposing preconceived views on their subordinates.

• A numerical limitation probably should be placed on the number of officers who can be assigned to the Joint Staff. "There is a tendency for a staff to grow," he said. "Once it reaches a certain point it grows automatically."

Admiral Burke brought up the point, which he said is "sometimes overlooked," that the "most important element in any human endeavor is the people" who make the organization work.

Blazer Boosts Clothes Costs, Says HQ

Air Force Headquarters has advised the field that major commanders sanctioning the wear of blazer or leisure and slacks combination "should keep in mind that the newly approved Mess Dress Uniform will add additional expense to their personnel."

The Pentagon said that the blazer is considered a civilian rather than a uniform item of clothing.

It was reported that one major air command asked and was given permission to use the Air Force coat of arms as a jacket adornment for leisure wear.

This permission was extended only to the use of the coat of arms and "should not be interpreted as official approval of a blazer or slacks," the Air Force said.

The Coat of Arms cannot be used without specific approval of Washington. Approved unit emblems may be used as a jacket adornment at the discretion of the major air commander.

Demotions Set For Below-Standard AF Officers; Regulars Down, Reserves Out

Officer demotions in the Air Force are being stepped up under a newly revitalized program aimed at down-grading officers who are not satisfactorily performing the duties of their rank.

Regulars who are selected for demotion will be reduced from their temporary higher grades to their permanent rank.

Reservists who are selected for demotion will be released from active duty.

Assistant Secretary of the Air Force David S. Smith has outlined the new policy in a letter to Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo) of the House Appropriations Committee.

Mr. Smith said:

"A review of the Air Force demotion practices showed that our past procedures for identifying and demoting substandard officers have been inadequate. Officers were considered for demotion only in connection with administrative separation for cause. Independent demotion action was almost nonexistent. Such a situation was unrealistic and inconsistent with the Air Force position of positive and continuing action to maintain the quality of the officer corps at the highest level.

"Accordingly, the Air Force initiated a revitalized demotion program. The basic concept of this program is that only those officers who clearly demonstrate the ability to assume and discharge the duties and responsibilities commensurate with their grades will be permitted to serve in those grades. Further, those officers who do not measure up to the required standards or whose capabilities have been exceeded will be considered for demotion.

"Upon being selected for demotion, Regular and Reserve officers serving in temporary grades higher than their permanent grades will be reduced in grade. However, the Reserve Officer Personnel Act of 1954 precludes the demotion of Reserve officers serving on active duty in grades equal to or lower than their permanent Reserve grades. Therefore, when a Reserve officer in this category has been selected for demotion, he is released from active duty under the authority contained in section 681, title 10, United States Code.

"I want to assure you that the release from active duty of Reserve officers selected for demotion has no relationship to a reduction in force. Officers are selected for demotion on the basis of substandard performance in the grades in which they are serving. Such action is taken only after a very thorough review of their records by a formerly convened board composed of senior officers in Air Force headquarters.

"This revised demotion program has been established to function on a continuing basis. Officers whose performance is below the standards for the grades in which they are serving on temporary appointments will be recommended for demotion consideration in accordance with schedules established for the permanent promotion cycles. In this manner, the demotion program will be used as an essential element of the continuing Air Force endeavor to keep the proficiency and competence of the officer corps at the highest levels. . . ."

Air Force Will Add 4,100 More Regulars

The Air Force, which during the past year has appointed 20,000 new Regular officers, will name an additional 4,100 in the next fiscal year.

From a Regular strength of 25,497 at the end of the last fiscal year—18.7 per cent of the total officers on active duty—the Air Force has expanded its Regular ranks to 45,300—35.3 per cent.

Plans made known to Congress during budget testimony forecast expansion to 49,400 regulars out of a total officer strength of 128,120—36.6 per cent.

Under current law, the Air Force is authorized 69,425 Regular officers with an initial goal of 55,540.

General Twining Corrects "Misconception" About The Prussian General Staff

GENERAL Nathan F. Twining, USAF, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in an appearance before the House Armed Services Committee 28 April, attempted to clear up "a misconception as to the composition and method of operation of the so-called 'Prussian General Staff.'"

He said he, personally would never want to see the U. S. Armed Forces "operate under such a staff concept," and "would like to lay to rest forever any thought that our present organization or our proposed organization approaches such a concept."

A description of the Prussian General Staff was prepared at General Twining's direction and submitted to the Committee. He said anyone who studies the paper and the proposed Pentagon organization "should conclude that there is more contrast than similarity between the two." Here is the text of the paper:

"Those who oppose the concept of greater unification in the U. S. Defense Establishment argue that a single military staff designed to coordinate the activities of all U. S. Armed Services, would create, in the United States a counter-part of the notorious German General Staff of World War I and World War II. This, the argumentation continues, is patently evil because German aggression in those wars was the inevitable result of German militarism, and German militarism in turn was the result of the predominance of the single German General Staff which, by establishing control over all of the armed services, was able to lead Germany down the road to military dictatorship and ruinous war. The same kind of organization would, as it had in Germany, create in this country national militarism which would be likely to lead the nation down a comparably disastrous road.

"It is also asserted that defeats which befell Germany in World Wars I and II were largely due to the inflexible kind of military thinking which is characteristic of a single General Staff. If the United States were to adopt such an organization, our military establishment would be characterized by comparable inflexibility and inefficiency. We defeated Germany with a Joint Chiefs of Staff system very much like the one we now have under the provisions of the National Security Act of 1947, as amended. Our WW II victory, it is asserted, is proof-positive that the Joint Chiefs of Staff system is more efficient than the single General Staff system which carried Germany down to defeat.

"Historical Inaccuracy" Cited

"These assertions regarding the evils and dangers of a single General Staff of the Prussian or German variety are based upon a fundamental historical inaccuracy.

"Germany did NOT have a single General Staff for her armed services in WW I. The German Army and the German Navy were completely independent, and no staff existed to coordinate their efforts. It was to a large extent due to the failure of Germany to coordinate its Army and Navy efforts that Germany failed to achieve a quick victory in WW I.

"At the beginning of WW II Hitler exercised control over three entirely independent, and uncoordinated military services—Army (Reichswehr), Navy (Reichsmarine), and Air Force (Luftwaffe)—through a small personal staff composed of Army, Navy, and Air Force officers, and entitled the Armed Forces Supreme Command (OKW); the individuals on this small personal staff of the German dictator were picked not for their military knowledge, but because of their loyalty to Hitler and to the Nazi party.

No Unified Staff Control

"The historical evidence is clear that there was in Germany no pretense towards unified staff control of the three armed services during WW I or WW II. The Germans never established a unified command structure at any echelon below Hitler, and his personal staff advisers. Whatever coordination of effort was accomplished amongst the services was due to the initiative of individual German officers. I would like to read a quote from General Zimmerman of the German Army:

"It is a matter of irony that Eisenhower, the servant of the great democracies, was given full powers of command over an armed forces consisting of all three services. With us, living under a dictatorship where unity of command might have been taken for granted, each of the services fought its own battle. Neither Rundstedt nor Rommel, try though they might, succeeded in changing this state of affairs in creating a unified command. The result was that the German Army fought single-handed against all the armed forces of the Allies."

"The fact that there was inadequate understanding of sea power evidenced in top level German military decisions can in no way be used as an indictment of centralized military control. Quite the contrary, such evidence of lack of proper evaluation of all military considerations is clear proof that this, like other failures in military coordination was due to the lack of a single German Staff where all aspects of all military problems could have been considered in a logical, thorough manner.

"There was, of course, a German General Staff during both WW I and WW II. This staff, however, was an Army staff only, and in neither war did it have any responsibility for overall interservice coordination.

"Undoubtedly, the German Army General Staff was in many respects characteristic of German militarism. Throughout its history the General Staff served as a loyal and highly effective military instrument at the personal disposal of the Chief of State. It knew no civilian control other than the Chief of State himself. Its permanent corps of officers tended to lose contact with problems in the field, and, as a result, was frequently guilty of inflexibility and autocratic methods.

"Yet despite these faults, it was a highly efficient military organization, which was in large measure responsible for the amazing successes of the German Army in both World Wars. Had there been a similar organization coordinating all the efforts of all the German armed forces in World War II, there is solid historical evidence that many of the most serious German military mistakes, for which Hitler and his small group of personal advisers were responsible, would never have been made, and the course of World War II would undoubtedly have been far different than it was; ultimate Allied victory could have been far less certain.

Hitler Took Over Staff

"It is interesting to note, in fact, that it was an Army operating under the German General Staff concept which applied flexible, modern, integrated warfare in 1940 to completely overwhelm France, which despite separate Army, Navy and Air Force staffs, had adopted the single concept of war epitomized by the Maginot Line.

"As to the danger which a General Staff system poses to national civilian institutions of government, it should be pointed out that far from the German General Staff taking over the German government prior to WW II, it was Hitler who took over the German General Staff and the German Army."

Northrop Scorpion Called AF's Safest Fighter

The Northrop F-89 Scorpion Interceptor was the safest operational fighter aircraft in the Air Force during 1957, according to Maj. Gen. Joseph D. Caldera, Air Force Director of Flight Safety Research.

In a letter to Robert R. Miller, Northrop Division Vice-President and General Manager, General Caldera cited the Scorpion's safety record for 1957 of 23 major accidents per 100,000 flying hours.

The F-89D was the first airplane to carry wingtip rocket pods, a Northrop development. With these pods, the "D" can fire 104 rockets selectively or in salvo.

The F-89H was the first aircraft to use the Hughes Falcon air-to-air guided missile. The plane carries six Falcons and 42 2.75 inch rockets.

An F-89J was chosen as the firing vehicle for the first test firing of the Douglas MB-1 Genie missile with a nuclear warhead.

"DRONE LAUNCHER"

The Air Force has designated the propjet C-130 Lockheed Hercules transport as the "universal drone launcher."

The C-130 will launch missile target drones and also will be used as the control airplane to direct drone launching maneuvers.

Because of its 4,300-cu.-ft. cargo carrying capacity, the Hercules at the same time will serve as the logistical support airlift for the drone operating unit, transporting both personnel and equipment.

General E. W. Rawlings, head of Air Materiel Command, announced a contract has been signed instructing Lockheed at Marietta, Ga., to remodel two C-130As into target drone launching aircraft for use at Holloman AFB, N. Mex., and at Eglin AFB, Fla.

More than 160 of the C-130s are currently in Air Force service in the U. S. and overseas. Powered by four Allison T56 turbines with a total of 15,000 eshp., it can carry cargoes up to approximately 20 tons.

Is Congress Getting The Full Picture?

We hope the "no-compromise" attitude of the President and his advisors on Defense Reorganization will not result in the suppression of any evidence or professional advice that might assist the Congressional Committees in making decisions on this important piece of legislation.

The Administration's fight-it-out-on-this-line policy now appears so well established that President Eisenhower felt it necessary to issue a statement last Saturday from Augusta, Ga., which gave the inference that he was repudiating the conciliatory attitude shown last week by Secretary of Defense McElroy. Mr. McElroy, it is recalled, made an excellent impression on the House Armed Services Committee by his willingness to discuss differences and his offer to reword some sections of the Administration's proposed law. As one of the Nation's top sales experts, Mr. McElroy doubtless was using a salesman's approach; he was avoiding sharp and open conflicts in anticipation of reaching an understanding most favorable to his side. Apparently, the President's advisors on reorganization were frightened by this technique. The final result was that both the President and the Defense Secretary issued public statements that they would hold the line on the Administration's Reorganization proposals. Whatever the intent, the result has been to weaken Mr. McElroy's effectiveness.

Meanwhile there are rumbles that all the information is not getting to Congress. One significant study on Reorganization is the Wheeler Report (see THE JOURNAL 25 January 58) made last year under the direction of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. This report was not made public then, at a time when the Gaither and Rockefeller Reports were getting national publicity, and it has not been made public since. News commentator Martin Agronsky recently brought the suppression of this report to the attention of the Senate Constitutional Rights Subcommittee. He also told his NBC radio audience that the Wheeler Report conflicts with the Administration's plan in that, while recommending some changes in the Defense Department, it holds that the President and Secretary now have adequate powers to bring about these changes.

The Wheeler Committee, under the chairmanship of Maj. Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, USA, included ranking officers from each of the four services and its report was said to be unanimous. We think Congress should have the benefit of its study and report.

Science Foundation Looks At Retired Officers

The National Science Foundation is contributing most effectively to the future strength and security of the nation in its current effort to increase the availability and use of retired military officers to teach mathematics and science. Leaders in education agree that one of the reasons for the unsatisfactorily low number of students taking these important subjects is the shortage of qualified teachers.

Now, as a part of its program of studies of scientific manpower resources, the National Science Foundation has sponsored a study by the Public Management Research Institute in consultation with an advisory council headed by Lt. Gen. Willard S. Paul, USA-Ret., President of Gettysburg College and President of the Retired Officers Association.

The study, as reported in the article on page 24 of this issue, shows definitely that retired officers are a potential source of mathematics and science teachers. The group recommends that qualified officers be told of this need for teachers prior to their retirement and specific information be given them as to existing teaching vacancies so that they can plan their retirement to fit them, if they so desire. General Paul's group also recommended that the Foundation provide the funds to prepare officers for teaching careers through refresher courses.

Retired Service personnel are contributing to their nation's strength and defense in many ways. The National Science Foundation is to be commended for its efforts to open the pathway to teaching and thus further broaden their opportunity to serve.

New Pay Scales Assured

It now seems a surety that a new schedule of pay will go into effect in the Armed Services on 1 June. The Senate amendments force the return of the measure to the House from whence it will go to a conference between the two houses to iron out their differences. The fact that each chamber passed the bill by such an overwhelming majority (87-0 in the Senate; 377-22 in the House) would appear to give each group of conferees about equal power so that the final result will represent a direct compromise between the two versions.

Unfortunately, the failure of the Senate to extend the new active-duty pay provisions to those already retired and its ratification of House six per cent increase for the retired lists prevents the conferees from further strengthening the application of the new scales to those previously retired. This is unfortunate, for it is a breach of established practice not to extend to those who already have served their careers the same proportionate increases as given to those on active duty.

The strongly favorable votes in both Houses, plus the fact that both went beyond the increases recommended in the Administration's original draft, is a tribute to the understanding attitude of the Senators and Representatives of this important problem and its impact upon the efficiency and economy of National Defense.

READERS' VIEWS

■ May I suggest that there be sent to all Members of the Congress copies of your editorial in the issue of 5 April 1958 on the subject of pay for retired personnel of the Armed Forces?

It is a very forceful and accurate statement of conditions, and of the absolute necessity for continuing in future the traditional procedure with respect to the pay of all retired personnel bearing a fixed relationship to pay of active personnel of corresponding rank.

I wrote to two members of the House of Representatives, enclosing copies of your editorial.

COL. USA-RET.

■ It is with great pleasure that I learn of your purchase, together with your associate, Mrs. Dorothy Cone Brown, of the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL.

During the many years in which you have edited this outstanding service publication, the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL has achieved its pre-eminent position not only through the authoritative nature of its factual material, but also from the standpoint of its clarity and journalistic excellence.

I am certain that the challenge of your new ownership will bring forth even more outstanding work on the part of THE JOURNAL, work that has always been of the greatest importance to military commanders at all echelons in their performance of duty.

■ Gadzooks and double darn. I can never read an Army Field Manual without falling asleep. To get the meaning I have to wade through several times. We never use a small word where a three syllable one will do. We "utilize" never "use"; "accomplish" never "do"; "perform his functions" never "works." The only impression I get from a first reading is that the writer has a big vocabulary and is writing up to me. Poor guy, he doesn't ever get to sign his masterpiece and must forever hide his light.

There are several devices for finding out how readable a manual or a letter is. One of the more popular of these is the "fog count." Long sentences with many words of several syllables give a high fog count number. This number may be easily related to the educational level of the audience. I chose a manual at random and took the fog count of the first page. Apparently, readers of Army manuals are all Ph.D.s. of philosophy. Good writing techniques ask that the brain not be taxed to its utmost all the time. The proper level for writing seems to be about one step below the educational level of the reader.

It's also greatly disappointing to decipher several paragraphs and find that its meaning adds up to a gem like this: "large airborne operation involving the Army and the Air Force deep in the enemy's territory requires planning." Oh! how much wiser I am now that I've been told this. I never would have figured that out for myself.

Let's quit trying to impress. Write only to be understood and convey a message.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Despite opposition by the Administration, the Senate Appropriations Committee, by a vote of 16-to-1, has approved funds for the immediate start on a plane procurement program to build a 70-group Air Force.

50 Years Ago — The announcement that Canada is preparing to build a waterway 22 feet deep from the eastern side of Georgia Bay across to Ottawa and down the Ottawa to the St. Lawrence at Montreal, ought to be a spur to the improvement of our interior waterways.

90 Years Ago—Like the chair avoided so carefully in the juvenile game, the seat of the Secretary of War, ordinarily a desirable berth, is now universally disdained. Seven years Mr. Stanton held it in succession, and now as many as seven different people will have had it in their power, within the space of one year.

■ On behalf of the personnel of the United States Army Air Defense Command, I extend congratulations to you and Mrs. Dorothy Brown on your purchase of the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL.

I wish each of you as well as Mr. Daniel Henkin continued success in your efforts to support the Armed Forces with news of a military nature.

Air Force Projects Time In Grade Forecasts For Officers Through '62

The Air Force has advised Congress, as part of action on the military pay bill, of projected time in grade for officer promotions during the next four fiscal years, compared to the year which ends next month.

Promotions to first lieutenant will continue to be made, as at present, after completion of 18 months service.

Here is the picture for other ranks:

FISCAL '58
	Average	Maximum	Minimum
1st Lt.	13.5	15.0	8.0
2nd Lt.	6.0	12.5	4.5
3rd Lt.	6.5	14.0	4.5

6th Lt.	1.5	1.5	1.5

HIGHER TEMP. RANK

The Air Force reports that 9181 Regular officers—34 per cent of the total at the time of the survey—are serving one grade above their permanent rank.

As of mid-February, the Air Force had 5 Regular officers serving three grades above their permanent status and 1002 two grades higher.

Navy Expects Delays For Officer Boosts

Thousands of Navy officers are going to serve longer periods in grade—up to 1½ years more—before being promoted during the next four years.

A projection of Navy promotion prospects for unrestricted line officers shows that the fiscal '58 average time in grade for promotion to commander—4½ years—will rise to 5 years in fiscal '59, 5½ in fiscal '60, and 6 years in fiscal '61 and '62.

Similarly, promotions to lieutenant commander, now being made after an average of 5 years in grade, although expected to remain at that figure next year, will rise to a requirement of 5½ in fiscal '60 and '61 and 6 years in fiscal '62.

It's expected that promotions to lieutenant will continue to be made after an average of 2½ years in grade.

For promotions to captain, there will be a drop, according to Navy expectations—from 9½ years at present, to 9 in fiscal '59, '60 and '61 and 8½ in fiscal '62.

Promotions to rear admiral lower half are expected to require an average of 10 years in grade through fiscal '61, and rise to 10½ years in fiscal '62.

For promotion to rear admiral upper half, the present 4½ years will continue through fiscal '60, then drop to 4 years for fiscal '61 and '62.

"Command-Responsibility Pay" For Officers May Face House-Senate Conference Fight

A FIGHT may shape up among House and Senate conferees on the special "combat and responsibility pay" up to $150 per month—added to the military pay bill by the Senate. The plan would cost about $12,000,000.

Senator John C. Stennis (D-Miss), who authored the proposal, will fight for it. He can claim that he went along with the House on all of its major recommendations, and ask backing in this one area which he considers of extreme importance.

On the other hand, the Services are known to be opposed to the plan. They say it will be difficult to administer. They could find strong support among the House conferees.

Here is what the Senate Armed Services Committee had to say about the special officer pay when it reported the pay bill to the Senate floor:

"Under the present pay system, an officer's pay is determined principally by his rank. It is recognized that both the abilities and responsibilities of officers within a particular grade vary to a considerable degree.

"The changing nature and complexity of our weapons systems are creating demands for unusual responsibility in both staff and command assignments, or a combination of both. These responsibilities, in many cases, may be distinguishable from the bulk of others held by those in that rank.

"Neither the present pay system nor the promotion system adequately acknowledges this type of individual.

"THE CHANGING NATURE of our military services is requiring greater leadership in the scientific fields as well as command leadership in the usual sense . . .

"This provision is permissive in nature and places wide discretionary authority in the secretary concerned for its administration. The committee realizes the difficult problems as a result of this innovation and recognizes that careful administration will be required. The value of this provision, which the committee considers sound in principle, will depend almost entirely upon the wisdom of its administration.

"In establishing the percentage limitations for each grade, the committee did not necessarily intend that the maximum number should receive such pay. In the case of O-3, captain, for example, it is recognized that a lesser number than that authorized may be eligible under the strict criteria to receive the additional pay.

"Furthermore, it should be emphasized that the references to command and staff positions are not intended to apply only to the use of those terms as used in the conventional military tables of organization. There may be other positions which would meet the criteria but not be strictly within these definitions.

"An officer who holds a position of unusual responsibility and of a critical nature to the service concerned would be expected to be one who would be responsible on his own behalf for the success or failure resulting from his decisions.

"The committee is aware that the Department of Defense is on record as opposing, as a matter of principle, differential pay for officers. At the same time, the committee wishes to point out that some military leaders consider the matter sound in principle and that it would result in a vast improvement in the present pay system if properly administered.

"The COST of administering this provision will not be excessive. If fully implemented in 1959 the total cost would be approximately $12 million if implemented to the fullest extent possible." The cost by grade and numbers follows:

Grade	Number	Cost
O-6	1,403	$2,525,000
O-5	3,036	3,643,000
O-4	5,273	3,164,000
O-3	4,600	2,760,000
Total	14,312	12,092,000

Top Airman Boosts Drop With Cuts

The Air Force will reduce from 41,453 to 31,400 the number of promotions to the top three airman grades from fiscal '58 to fiscal '59.

Plans call for 2,000 promotions to master sergeant during the year starting 1

July (2,225 this year); 5,400 to technical sergeant (5,668); and 24,000 to staff sergeant (33,560).

Airman strength at the beginning of fiscal '59 will be 742,000, but will drop to 714,400 a year later.

Army Officers Face Longer Service For Promotion In Next Five Years

Most Army officers will find themselves serving longer periods of time in grade for promotion during the next five years, although shortened service is in prospect for some ranks next year, notably to colonel and captain.

This is the conclusion to be made in analyzing promotion data supplied to the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee considering the military pay bill and presented herewith.

The Army anticipates that temporary promotions to first lieutenant will continue to be made upon completion of 18 months service through fiscal '63.

The following table shows the expected minimum and average time in grade for the various ranks this fiscal year and for '59, '61 and '63.

Marines Forecast Increased Time In Grade For Fiscal '59 Promotions To Captain-Major

The Marine Corps anticipates that officers being promoted during the next fiscal year to captain and major will have to spend one more year in grade than at present. It's expected that 4-5 years will be required for promotions to captain, 6-7 for major.

The following table, made available at the Stennis Senate Armed Services Subcommittee in connection with the pay hearings, shows Marine Corps time in grade for officer promotions from fiscal '55 through fiscal '63.

The forecasts for the future are based on the assumption that some kind of "hump" legislation will be voted. If this isn't done, promotions will be slowed considerably.

THE ARMED SERVICES COMMITTEES will point to their action on the pay legislation as proof of their contention that it is the responsibility of Congress—not the Executive Branch—to write major legislation. Actually, the pay bill voted by the House and Senate, except that the cost is raised significantly, does not do violence to the Administration's proposals. Nonetheless, the point is that Congress did revise the measure in many ways—an action that could well be duplicated in the Defense Reorganization Plan.

SUPPORT IS GROWING for a change in current Medicare policies to restrict the freedom of choice of Service families between Service hospitals and civilian facilities. The point is being made that if Service hospital beds were used to the maximum of their availability, family care costs could be substantially reduced.

RISING TUITION COSTS—in some cases, colleges and universities have boosted their fees $500—have prompted a Navy decision to reduce the number of NROTC students being sent to high-cost institutions in favor of lower-cost campuses. It's also pertinent that fewer graduates of the expensive schools have decided to stay in the Navy after obligated tours than graduates whose education was less costly to the Nation. Average cost of a Holloway student for four years is about $8000.

AN INTERESTING SIDELIGHT to the Reorganization Plan testimony this week of Pentagon Special Assistant Charles Coolidge was the disclosure that the proposal, as sent to the White House, apparently would have downgraded the Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs to "Special Assistant," as has been proposed for the Assistant Secretary (Health and Medical). President Eisenhower changed the Pentagon proposal to retain the Assistant Secretary status; present incumbent is Mr. Murray Snyder, former White House Deputy Press Secretary.

MR. COOLIDGE ALSO MADE KNOWN that it was the Chief Executive who added the proviso which would bar the Service Secretaries and Military Chiefs from going to Congress, after notifying the Secretary of Defense, in order to present matters which they think of concern to the Legislative Branch. The present authority for such reclama access to Congress has not been used but the Reorganization Plan would specifically eliminate it.

A FORMER NAVY FLYER serves on the Board of Trustees of the Association of the U. S. Army (Page 4). He is Mr. Robert L. Biggers, President of the Fargo Division of the Chrysler Corporation. He became the Navy's 215th aviator in October 1917.

THE ARMY ASSOCIATION, which has added thousands of members during the past several years, continues handicapped to some extent in presenting a "unified" position because of the fact that there are other Army groups, such as the Armor Association which met this week at Ft. Knox, Ky. The Navy League and Air Force Association have no such splinter problems.

THE AIDE-DE-CAMP INSIGNIA will be retained by the Army and Air Force. The Navy several years ago decided against such a device; the Marines have just decided to drop it (Page 6). All aides to generals and admirals wear aiguillettes. The Navy and Marines think that is enough.

THE FAILURE OF PENTAGON OFFICIALS, including Secretary of Defense McElroy and General Twining, to be responsive to questions from House Armed Services Committee members regarding the planned size of the Joint Staff undoubtedly will heighten the demand for release of the Wheeler Report. This is the document prepared by representatives from all the Services on the JCS organization. So far, it has been suppressed (Page 10).

CHANCES ARE SLIM that Secretary of Defense McElroy will permit the Service Secretaries to hold news conferences at the Pentagon. They have not been willing to meet with reporters during the past year, except in emergency situations, such as when troubles occurred with a Congressional group going to Kentucky at the time of the 1957 Derby. Many newsmen contend that the failure of the Service Secretaries, to hold periodic press conferences has hurt the prestige of these offices, and has been a factor in "leaks" by so-called eager-beavers.

SECRETARY McELROY APPARENTLY believes that he should do all the talking at Pentagon press conferences. This view also was held by his predecessor, Secretary Wilson, but the latter made it a point to hold regular news conferences—usually twice a month. Secretary McElroy will have to step lively to match that record. He's been in office almost 7 months, has held a total of 5 press conferences.

HIGHEST POSSIBLE PRAISE has been accorded Maj. Gen. Frank A. Bogart, Air Force Budget Director, by Chairman Mahon (D-Tex.) and members of the House Military Appropriations Subcommittee. Noting that the General is slated for an assignment change this summer, Mr. Mahon said: "We have never had a more able representative in fiscal affairs in uniform representing any of the Services . . . You have done a wonderful job. My only complaint and regret is that you have worked too hard." Representative Scrivner (R-Kans.), joining the praise, said the Appropriations group "would be within our rights to request the Services to extend a tour of duty like this." Responded Mr. Mahon: "I would not wish the General such ill fortune."

HIGH PRESSURE RETAIL GROUPS are getting ready for new behind-the-scenes attacks on PX's. They will use the pay legislation as a pretext, will claim that lower prices at PX's no longer are essential to morale. The National Retail Merchants Association will try to convince the Appropriations Committees in closed-door sessions that PX's should be forced to pay higher costs in such overhead items as facilities and shipping—which would mean higher prices.

BEST FRIENDS OF SERVICE FAMILIES against such attacks will be the Armed Services Committees, notably the House group, which insists that supervision of PX's is its responsibility. The House group last year, after an exhaustive inquiry, gave the PX operation solid endorsement, in fact authorized a more liberal sales list for ZI. This action irked the NRMA, which apparently decided to lay low until the pay legislation is passed.

ARMED FORCES RETIRED PAY, which will total about $589 million for the fiscal year starting 1 July—up $34 million from this year—is expected to go over the billion dollar mark in 1968. This could be a factor in forthcoming Congressional action on the Pentagon's "White Charger" officer personnel plan, which would accelerate retirements.

'Don't Tell Your Source'

USCMA Advises Lawyers

The U. S. Court of Military Appeals has told law officers not to reveal the source of psychiatric materials included in their court-martial instructions.

In U. S. v. Gray, decided 25 April, the judges noted: "Court members may be inclined to attach additional weight—which is wholly undeserving—to an instruction if they are told that such instruction has been framed from matter contained in an official service publication, such as a 'Tech manual.' In a word, the source of the instruction is not a matter for the court-martial's concern or consideration and the better practice would be for the law officer to exclude such information in his charge."

The court also said that law officers, in framing their instructions should "carefully avoid" the indiscriminate use of lengthy psychiatric passages.

These passages, the court said, should be chosen with a "high degree of selectivity" and "properly tailored to the particular facts so that they will present the issue as fully and accurately as possible."

MRS. STILES IN KENTUCKY

Mrs. Florence Whipple Stiles, widow of Lt. Col. Henry R. Stiles, USA-Ret., is making her home at 1133 Cherokee Rd., Louisville 4, Ky.

Service Families Will Want To Know

THE COMPTROLLER GENERAL has advised an Air Force widow there is "no legal basis" for the Government to pay travel expenses for herself and her children from her husband's last permanent station to their civilian home.

The husband, M/Sgt. Harry E. Marcum, was retired for physical disability 18 July 1957. He was entitled to transportation for himself and his dependents from his last permanent station to his selected home of retirement. He died the next day, before the travel could be performed.

Denying Mrs. Marcum's claim for the Government travel allowance, the Comptroller ruled that "the right of a retired member to transportation for his dependents, or to an allowance in lieu of transportation accrues only to the retired member—not to his dependents—and such right does not survive the member's death...."

THE TEXAS MEDICAL ASSOCIATION has withdrawn from the Medicare program, and the Office for Dependent's Medicare in Washington has entered into an agreement with Mutual of Omaha to pay physicians in the Lone Star State.

Texas physicians should forward their bills henceforth to: "Mutual Benefit Health and Accident Association, Mutual of Omaha, Post Office Box 1298, Omaha, Nebr."

THE NAVY SAYS it "will not be a haven of refuge" for officers and men attempting to avoid just obligations, according to VAdm. Harold P. Smith, Chief of Personnel.

In an instruction to all ships and stations, the Personnel Chief stressed that Navy members have a legal and moral obligation to support their minor children. The duty, it was said, is not "affected by desertion or other misconduct on the part of the wife. The obligation to support a child or children is not affected by dissolution of the marriage through divorce, unless the judicial decree or order specifically negates the obligations of the husband...."

The instruction outlines for commanding officers the actions they may take in cases of non-support brought to their attention.

From first page—

Staff be given authority for operational planning for the unified commands.

Committee members indicate they are unwilling to grant a "blank check" for this purpose, but would consider raising the ceiling after they see the changed responsibilities and increased duties of the enlarged structure spelled out in greater detail.

Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy told the Committee that studies are now being made to determine the exact size and composition of the staff and the final recommendation may be in the neighborhood of 400 officers.

General Nathan F. Twining, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the Chiefs are now considering whether to add an operations section to the Joint Staff or to provide an integrated staff. He said the Staff itself has recommended the creation of a J-1 section for personnel, a J-2 section for intelligence, a J-3 section for operations, a J-4 section for logistics and a J-5 section for planning.

General Twining told the Committee that reorganization plans for the Joint Staff will be ready for the Committee's consideration before it completes hearings on the overall reorganization bill.

Numerous members of the Committee, including Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) and Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.) have expressed fears that the organization could grow into a Prussian-type general staff.

General Twining said none of the Joint Chiefs fear the emergence of such a staff. The Prussian general staff, he said, was a supreme, monolithic organization from a single service, and the officers assigned to it devoted their entire careers to staff work. The Joint Staff, he said, would be composed of officers from all four Services, who would have to return to the field after three, at most four, years' service on the Staff.

He said the viewpoints of the individual Services "will not be submerged" in the enlarged Joint Staff because all joint actions "normally will be referred to the Services." If differences arise, he said, the Joint Staff will attempt to solve the problem. If it cannot do so, the matter will be referred to the Joint Chiefs.

New Powers for JCS Chairman

The President also has asked that the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs be given authority to select the Director of the Joint Staff, and that the Joint Staff be placed directly under the Chairman. The present limitation which says the Chairman will have no "vote" in the deliberations of the Joint Chiefs would be removed.

General Twining told the Committee these changes are needed to improve the working relationship between the Chairman, the Director of the Joint Staff and the Joint Staff.

He noted that the Chairman currently is charged with managing the Joint Staff, and to do this effectively he must be able to select a Director with whom he can work in close harmony. Also, he said, the Chairman, because of his management responsibilities, must be able to assign work to the Joint Staff without the "obviously impractical" step of calling a meeting of the Joint Chiefs to obtain their approval.

The change, he said, will not "actually change anything I am doing today. It would just legalize what I am doing."

The prohibition on the Chairman's right to vote has little meaning, General Twining told the Committee, because no vote is taken in the Joint Chiefs. But, he added, the prohibition should be removed because it acts to "downgrade the office of the Chairman."

Committee members pointed out that the original law creating the position of Chairman contemplated that he would be only a "coordinator" or "presiding officer" and that his main duties would be to provide an agenda for the Chiefs, to expedite the work of the Chiefs and to present issues which were in disagreement to the Secretary of Defense.

Chairman Vinson asked if, by placing the Joint Staff under the Chairman, the action would not "isolate the Joint Chiefs of Staff and push them aside."

General Twining said there was "no thought of pushing aside the Joint Chiefs." They would continue to operate much as they operate now, he said, and they would have a hand in the selection of the Director, and would continue to have authority to assign work to the Joint Staff.

The Chairman, he said, would have "no more right or authority to shape strategic planning than any other member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

Authority of Unified Commanders

The proposed reorganization also asks stronger and wider authority for unified commanders in the field.

The Committee questions whether such authority could be used to strip the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps of all control over their own forces.

General Twining's answer is that "control of Service units assigned to unified commands does not change except for operations." He told the Committee, field commanders should "have unquestioned authority over all units which they command." But, "We do not want them, on the other hand, to be bogged down with the details of administration, or the nuts and bolts of logistic support."

He said individual Service chiefs would continue to provide all administrative support for their units assigned to unified commands, including promotion, demotion, discipline, schooling, assignment, and other types of personnel administration. If a unified commander desires to relieve, discipline or transfer a man in an Army, Navy or Air Force unit under his command, he "will act" through the unit commander "except in unusual circumstances."

He said this is a continuation of the system currently in effect, and the only major change would be that Service Chiefs could not arbitrarily move or withdraw forces assigned to unified commands.

Cites "Real Weakness"

He said: "If the over-all strategic situation requires changes in assignment of forces to our field commanders, we think that the Joint Chiefs of Staff should make this determination and should so recommend to the Secretary of Defense. We believe that we have a real weakness in team effort so long as a single Department retains this authority."

The JCS Chairman promised to give closed-door testimony about incidents in which Service Chiefs have withdrawn forces from the unified commands without proper consultation or approval of the Joint Chiefs.

He mentioned that the "desire to strengthen and widen the authority" of the field commanders is due in part to the fact that "We cannot afford to delay until after war starts, the processes of assigning and reassigning our major combat forces."

Representative Melvin Price (D-Ill.) asked what "reassigning" is contemplated and General Twining replied that he would get into "deep water" if he attempted to discuss the plans in open hearings. He promised to give further details in secret testimony.

In answer to a question of Chief Counsel Robert W. Smart, General Twining said the operational staff within the Joint Staff would provide operational plans only for the unified commands.

Defense Secretary Tells Problem

Secretary McElroy said one of the faults with the present system is that there are no proper controls on information coming back from the unified commands. Problems now go to the executive agents, he said, who try to solve the problem within their own Service.

House Unit Fears Authority Danger

This means that the Joint Staff and the Secretary of Defense "are not necessarily kept informed of problems encountered by the unified commands." As a result, he said, it is sometimes 30 days or more before the problem finds "its way through to the Joint Staff."

General Twining said that as Chief of Staff of the Air Force, he sometimes attempted to correct such problems on his own in order to "make my Service look a little better." He said he now realizes that he "shouldn't have" and that a system must be provided so that such problems can be referred to and "solved immediately" by the Joint Staff.

He told the Committee "it never did make sense" to him to have a Service Secretary in the chain of command. Each Secretary, he said, has "staff competence" only for his own Service, and, in order to discharge his executive agency responsibility with respect to other Services in a unified command, "has had either to coordinate extensively with other agencies, or to act in ignorance of the nature of two-thirds of his problem."

Power To Abolish, Transfer Or Reassign

The President's proposal to give the Secretary of Defense full power to transfer, reassign, abolish or consolidate functions has raised numerous questions in the Committee.

It is within this area that the "legal" aspects of the proposal have been most sharply attacked.

Under questioning, Pentagon Special Assistant for Reorganization, Charles A. Coolidge has admitted that the Marine Corps could be stripped of its aviation units and the Army of all missiles if it was determined that these functions were "overlapping, inefficient" or caused "duplication."

Mr. Coolidge, in answer to a question by Chairman Vinson, also said the Secretary of Defense could conclude that the Army engineers and the Bureau of Yards and Docks should be "merged," provided he reported the move to Congress.

All of the Defense Department witnesses testified, however, that no such steps are contemplated.

Many members of the Committee wanted to know what would happen if the Congress should not be in session at the time the Secretary of Defense decided to transfer, reassign or abolish some function.

Committee Counsel John R. Blandford noted that, even if the proposal was amended to provide that Congress would have to give its approval before such a step could be carried out, the will of a majority of the Congress could nevertheless be thwarted. For example, he said, the Secretary could make known his intentions, the Congress could turn thumbs down by enacting a law to forbid whatever step was contemplated, the President could veto the law and, if Congress then was able to muster "one vote less than a two-thirds majority, the views of a minority would prevail."

Mr. Blandford noted that the President has said the reorganization plan will help to eliminate certain "outmoded military machines and concepts that exist in our military program today." He asked Secretary McElroy to name some of the things which "you would eliminate right now."

The Defense Secretary was unable to cite specific examples. He said "I don't think we have any big thing that we have in mind doing." The new authority, he said, will help the Services to adjust to future weapons.

Mr. Smart wanted to know, inasmuch as there was no intention of abolishing or merging any of the Armed Forces, if Secretary McElroy would have any objection to language changes which would "preserve your intent and protect the Services?"

The Secretary said he believed the language of the proposal was "unnecessarily broad" in some instances and he would be agreeable to language changes if the changes provide the authority which he and the President believe essential to improve Defense Department operations.

He agreed that the language is immaterial "so long as we participate (in developing the new language) and have an opportunity to express judgment as to whether the language does do what we want." He said he would not consider this a retreat from the position taken on the reorganization by the Administration.

Other Highlights

In other highlights of the hearings:

● General Maxwell Taylor, Chief of Staff of the Army, told the Committee he is "in sympathy" with the reorganization proposals, and he does not believe the changes will undermine the importance of the Army or interfere with the Army's combat missions.

● General Taylor also said he believes the enlarged Joint Staff will "absorb some of the functions" now performed by some of the Assistant Secretaries of Defense.

● The Army Chief of Staff said he does not think it is necessary to put a limitation on the number of officers who can be assigned to the Joint Staff, but he accepts the "practical desirability" of such a move on the part of the Committee.

● General Twining testified that he does not believe the reorganization plan will eliminate any single Service, any part of a single Service, create a German-type general staff or by-pass the Services in any way.

● Secretary McElroy said the procurement authority which the proposal seeks is designed only to assist the new Research Director in filling-in gaps which now exist in the separate R&D programs conducted by the individual Services.

● Chairman Vinson and other members of the Committee objected to the proposal to eliminate semi-annual reports from each of the Services. Secretary McElroy said he would be agreeable to continue the reports. He said the step was designed only to eliminate cumbersome paperwork.

● Mr. Coolidge testified that the language in the President's reorganization message to the Congress "was much more powerful" than the language drafted by the Reorganization Committee. He also said the President made a few changes in the Pentagon plan (see Memo, page 12).

● Representative James P. S. Devereux (R-Md) drew an admission from General Twining that most of those who had worked on the reorganization plan were officers who have "staff" backgrounds.

● Representative Frank C. Osmer (R-NJ) charged that members of the Committee "in their zeal to prevent military control, have been guided by fear of a European staff system rather than by attention to our own needs." He suggested that the reorganization will provide "unified command at the top as well as out in the field."

● Secretary McElroy revealed that the Armed Forces' Special Weapons Project will be placed under the Joint Chiefs of Staff as a result of the reorganization, and the Weapons System Evaluations Group will be placed under the new Research Director.

National Science Foundation Studies Use Of Retired Officers As Science Teachers

THE National Science Foundation has made public a report which calls for increased use of retired military officers as teachers of mathematics, science and engineering courses at the high school level.

The Foundation-sponsored study was conducted by the Public Management Research Institute in consultation with an advisory council whose chairman was Lt. Gen. W. S. Paul, USA-Ret., President of Gettysburg College, Pa., and President of the Retired Officers Association.

The Advisory Council recommended that the Defense Department disseminate information to the Services about the critical need for high school science and mathematics teachers.

The Council said that the National Science Foundation should provide necessary financial assistance to make it possible for retired officers to prepare for post-retirement teaching careers through appropriate refresher courses.

It was also recommended that officials responsible for obtaining and certifying high school teachers be encouraged to utilize retired officers.

At present, special teacher training courses for retired officers are given at Purdue University, Duke University and the University of California (THE JOURNAL 26 April), but without the financial assistance for participants that is urged in the new study.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

Navy Chooses Lockheed Electra For ASW;
Army Tests "Atomic" Food; Unveil A3J

The Navy will give an R&D contract to the Lockheed Corporation for a "mock up" model and outfitting study of an Electra turboprop for use in anti-submarine warfare.

The Lockheed Electra, powered by four Allison T-56 turboprop engines, will carry a crew of 10 and will be equipped with the latest instrumentation for detecting and destroying submarines. Eventually, it will replace the famous Lockheed P2V Neptune series, construction of which began in 1944.

TWO HUNDRED AND FORTY ARMY SOLDIERS, all volunteers, have begun participation in an acceptability test at Ft. Lee, Va., of food preserved by irradiation. The Army, cooperating with the Atomic Energy Commission, Department of Agriculture and more than 70 industrial and educational institutions, has pioneered research studies in the use of gamma rays and electrons to replace heat in killing or inactivating microorganisms which cause food spoilage.

The troops at Lee will be the first to eat irradiated food as part of regular meals in mess halls. One or more irradiated items will be served at each test meal, but the soldiers won't be told which is the experimental ration and which is non-irradiated.

In cooperation with industry, the Army will build an Ionizing Radiation Center at Sharpe General Depot, Calif., to develop methods of utilizing ionizing radiation for preservation of food and to establish commercial economics of the process.

ADMIRAL ARLEIGH BURKE, Chief of Naval Operations, will participate in ceremonies 16 May at which the Columbus, Ohio, Division of North American Aviation, Inc., will unveil the Navy's newest and most advanced attack aircraft, the twin-jet A3J. On hand to greet Admiral Burke will be North American's Board Chairman, J. H. Kindelberger, President J. L. Atwood and Vice President and General Manager of the Columbus Division, C. J. Gallant.

The Columbus plant also produces for the Navy the all-purpose T2J jet trainer.

DoD RESERVE AWARD is presented to the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company by General O. P. Weiland, Commander, Tactical Air Command. Receiving the award for the company is (left) Mr. John L. Collyer, Chairman of the Board; and (right) J. Ward Keener, company President. The award was presented as a result of recommendations submitted by Capt. John J. Apsaga, an employee of The B. F. Goodrich Company and Reservist member of the 9534th Air Reserve Squadron, Akron, Ohio. Apsaga's unit is assigned to the 2627th Air Reserve Center, 1002 East Market Street, Akron, Ohio, which is commanded by Lt. Col. James J. Kelly, Jr. who invited General Weiland to present the award in the name of the Armed Forces Reserve.

Raytheon Gets $9 Million For Hawk;
Chrysler Receives Jupiter Funds

The Army has awarded a $9,152,387 contract to Raytheon Manufacturing Company, Waltham, Mass., for production of Hawk missiles used against low-flying targets.

Chrysler Corporation of Detroit received $1,400,000 for Jupiter IRBM missile components for training.

COOPER B. BENEDICT, who has been active in farming near Lewisburg, W. Va., since 1949 after a long career in top positions with the Procter and Gamble Company, of which Secretary of Defense McElroy was President, has assumed office as Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Properties and Installations).

COL. RICHARD F. EBBS, USA, Deputy of the Army Corps of Engineers' North Pacific Division, will retire 31 May after 30 years service. He resides with his wife at 5705 N.E. 13th Ave., Portland, Oregon.

COL. THURSTON T. PAUL, USA, has been named Chief of the Jupiter Project Office, Army Ballistic Missile Agency, Huntsville, Ala.

LT. COL. BRIAN O. MONTGOMERY, USA, will succeed Colonel Paul as Director of the ABMA Support Operations Division.

LT. COL. WILLIAM J. BESSER, USA, former Director of Services, Sunny Point Army Terminal, South Port, N. C., has been named Chief of the Passenger Traffic Division at the Brooklyn, N. Y., Army Terminal. Colonel and Mrs. Besser reside with their two children at 7815 4th Ave., Brooklyn.

Singer Forms Defense Unit; Temco
Gets New Order; Bosch Arma Backlog

SINGER MFG. CO., New York City, founded in 1850, has formed a military products division to develop and produce electronic and electro-mechanical equipment for defense industries and the Armed Forces. The division, which will have a special interest in the missile and space fields, will be composed of: Haller, Raymond and Brown, Inc., a research and development firm recently acquired by the company; the Diehl Manufacturing Co., Singer's electrical division; and the company's Bridgeport, Conn., Works. Mr. Frederick W. Howells, former Military Sales Manager for the Columbus Division of North American Aviation, has been appointed Division Manager.

TEMCO AIRCRAFT CORP., Dallas, Tex., has received an additional order for ailerons, tabs and wing flaps for the Lockheed C-130 Hercules transport. The company's work on these parts will continue through the summer of 1959.

AMERICAN BOSCH ARMA CORP., Hempstead, N. Y., reported its defense backlog as of 30 March at $165 million. The company noted a nine per cent drop in military sales during the first quarter of 1958 as compared with the corresponding 1957 period.

COHU ELECTRONICS, INC., Los Angeles, has created a Military Products Division headed by Dr. Peter H. Kafitz, formerly with the Naval Ordnance Laboratory and the University of California Radiation Laboratory. The Division already has contracts with the Navy for shipboard electronic power supplies, and with Convair Astronautics for missile test instrumentation at Cape Canaveral, Fla., and other sites.

PHOENIX MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO., Hartford, Conn., has received a Defense Department Award for "outstanding cooperation with Reservists and Reserve Activities." Presentation was made 24 April to Benjamin L. Holland, Company President, by Brig. Gen. Paul Zuckerman, USAFR.

WASHINGTON ALUMINUM CO., Baltimore, has constructed the largest portable ramps ever built. The aluminum ramps, 15 feet wide by 40 feet long, can support a load of 120,000 pounds.

APPOINTMENTS

WYLIE C. BUETTNER—Defense Products Service Manager, Four Wheel Drive Auto Co., Clintonville, Wis.

G. W. BOEHM—Manager of Midwest Sales, Military Products Department, Detroit Controls Division of American Standard.

ROBERT B. CORBY—Manager of Motorola's missile range instrumentation marketing with headquarters at the Western Military Electronics Center, Phoenix.

GENERAL ELECTRIC CO. has appointed George D. Prestwich, USNA '43, to direct sales activities for the ballistic missile radar system, part of the AF Ballistic Missile Early Warning System, subcontracted to the company by RCA.

Small Business
Active In Missiles

Small business has received 21 per cent of all ballistic missile dollars spent by the Air Force.

Speaking before the Santa Monica Chamber of Commerce last week, Col. Sherman E. Ellis, Chief of the Production Staff Division of the Ballistic Missile Office, Inglewood, Calif., revealed that ballistic missile prime contractors have subcontracted more than $269 million to small business concerns which employ 500 or less people.

Colonel Ellis noted that 23%, or more than $18 million, of the Thor IRBM contract held by Douglas Aircraft Company had been distributed among 8473 different small business companies. Twenty per cent, or $45 million went to 4,000 small business subcontractors of Rocketdyne Division of North American Aviation for work on power plants for the Atlas ICBM and the Thor and Jupiter IRBMs.

SIERRA ENGINEERING CO., San Mateo, Calif., has appointed William Morton to its engineering staff. He formerly served with the Air Force Materiel Laboratory, Wright Air Development Center, Ohio.

What's New

SHORT-RANGE RADAR for use Army ground forces was demonstrated 28 April at Ft. Myer, Va. The device, developed by the Army's Diamond Ordnance Fuze Laboratories, Washington, D. C., has no blind spots and can detect troops within 500 yards accurately, and other vehicles within 3,000 yards and aircraft at five miles. Its screen separates objects as little as six inches apart.

TRANSONIC-SUPERSONIC wind tunnel was unveiled 26 April at Republic Aviation's Farmingdale, L. I., plant. The $1.2 million facility can artificially wind velocities from mach .8 to mach 5.

INCREASED MOBILITY for the 81 mm recoilless rifle has been achieved mounting it on the Scorpion M-56 chassis, originally designed for the 90-mm assault gun. The new recoilless rifle combination was tested by the Army Infantry School's Weapons Department, commanded by Col. Samuel T. McDowell.

"HUSH HOUSES" are now quieting jet engine noises at Edwards AFB, Calif. The specially designed test cells can reduce jet noise from 30 to 40 decibels at the low frequencies, and between 50 to 10 decibels in the middle and high frequencies.

MAJ. VERNON A. PETERSON, USA-Ret., a Ft. Carson, Colo., Signal Officer for the last four years, took over as the post Civilian Assistant Signal Officer after his retirement 30 April.

Senate Retains Six Per Cent Increase For Retired; Makes Six Other Changes

The Senate military pay bill follows the House lead in providing a straight, six per cent across-the-board increase for members of the Armed Forces on the retired rolls.

The total increase in retired pay under the Senate bill during fiscal '59 will be $40 million, compared with $40,403,000 under the House bill.

The Senate made several changes in the House bill. The changes:

- Eliminate the House provision permitting three- and four-star officers already on the retired rolls to recompute their retired pay on the basis of the new 0-9 and 0-10 pay grades.

- Authorize Admiral Arthur W. Radford, USN-Ret., to recompute his retired pay on the basis of the new $1,875 per month basic rate provided for the active duty Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

- Require at least one year of continuous active duty after recall from a retired status in order to recompute under the new rates of the Senate bill.

- Require two years of continuous active duty in order to recompute under the new rates for those who were recalled from a retired status in a higher rank received as a result of honorary promotions in the Navy and Marine Corps.

- Clarify the House bill so as to make certain that those persons retiring on the effective date of the bill will retire under the new rates.

- Prevent the inclusion of nonactive duty Reserve service in the computation of retired pay on the basis of a full active duty year.

Senate Cites Equity

In erasing the special House provision for three- and four-star officers already retired, the Senate Armed Services Committee said "If recomputation were permitted for these two ranks, it would result in an increase of 54 per cent for those in the rank of general, or equivalent, and 39 per cent for those in the rank of lieutenant general, or equivalent, as compared to a flat six per cent of all others retired.

The Committee was of the opinion that it would not be equitable to permit two pay grades to recompute, with the resulting increases, as contrasted to the other ranks who are extended only a flat six per cent increase."

New Retired Multiplier

A new section drafted by the Senate Committee affects the retired pay multiplier.

It provides that nonactive duty Reserve service cannot be included in the computation of retired pay on the basis of a full active duty year, and that such service will be computed on the basis of the point computation system applicable to Reserve officers retired under the reserve retirement law at age 60.

This new section affects those officers who serve at least 20 years on active duty and thereafter remain or are appointed in the Reserve prior to being transferred to a retired list with pay. As a result of the amendment, all future Reserve time will be computed on the same basis for retired pay purposes.

The amendment, however, is effective only upon the date of enactment and therefore prospective in nature. It would not affect the service presently creditable under existing law.

Also, the Committee emphasized that the amendment "affects only nonactive Reserve service and does not relate to other provisions of law crediting other than active service, such as constructive service and other provisions."

Comptroller Balks At USNA Retired Credit

The Comptroller General says he has "not, as yet, decided to follow" the U. S. Court of Claims decision in Foster v. U. S. which granted retirement credit to some Navy officers for service as a Midshipman at the U. S. Naval Academy prior to 4 March 1913.

Widows Will Receive Higher Survivor Benefit Payments Up To $337 Month

SURVIVOR benefits under the Senate pay bill will be increased as much as $95 per month for widows of four-star officers who served as Chief of Staff, as CNO or as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs.

Widows of other four-star officers will receive a $74 month increase.

Widows of three-star officers (who had at least 26 years' service at the time of their death) will receive an increase of $50 per month.

Widows of major generals and rear admirals of the upper half (who had at least 22 years' service at the time of their death) will receive an increase of $32 per month; and widows of one-star officers will receive increases ranging from $24 to $38 per month, depending upon the number of years' service completed by the officer before his death.

Persons who now receive survivor benefits can determine the increase they would receive under the Senate bill by multiplying the proposed base pay of their husband's rank (see chart) by 12 per cent and adding $112. Survivor payments are based on the most up-to-date active duty pay rates, regardless of the prevailing rate at the time of the member's death.

The following chart shows the prevailing survivor benefit payment for officers in various ranks, compared with the new rate which will be established if the Senate military pay bill becomes law:

Rank Of Deceased Member	Present Payment	New Payment
4-Star (Member JCS)	$242	$337
4-Star (not Member JCS)	242	316
3-Star (26 years' service)	242	292

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of the Treasury—Robert B. Anderson
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

The Navy has invited the Coast Guard to participate in its 1958 rifle and pistol competition which starts 12 May at Intertype and Interdistrict shoots. Rules governing the competition are listed in Bureau of Personnel Notice 100-1. There have been no changes in rules for previous years' meets.

Coast Guard units interested in shooting the matches may obtain rules from District Commanders if they do not have access to the Bureau Notice.

Coast Guard Headquarters urges all commands to stimulate interest in the matches and to participate to a maximum degree.

FINAL PAY RAISE ACTION

The Journal, which has given more complete coverage to the Cordiner Committee and subsequent action on the pay legislation than any other publication, is proud of the fact that when others gave up last year, we steadfastly insisted that a pay raise should and would be approved.

The Journal, which unveiled the secret Bureau of the Budget decision to eliminate retired persons from any benefits, is proud of its part in the start-to-finish fight for a modern system of military compensation.

In the weeks ahead, we shall cover the final action on the measure and its implementation by the Services. You will want to be sure to get the full story.

New Family-Group Plan Offered

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS—For some time the people at Time Life Insurance Company have been searching for a low-cost Family Group Life Insurance Plan for armed forces personnel and their families. Now that their studies have been successful, they have a low-cost family plan that will serve large, small, and growing families on a fair and economical basis for all.

Their studies indicated that a policy was needed which would pay at least $1,000 death benefit in event of natural death. Their plan also provides double the amount for accidental death and three times as much for death due to travel accidents where the insured is a fare-paying passenger—including buses, taxi-cabs, trains and even commercial airlines.

One of the many other features is a paid-up policy on the rest of the family in the event of your death—the premium payor.

The Company has an attractive free illustrated folder which will be sent on request. When writing the Company, we suggest you include the ages of every member of your family so rate quotation may be given.

You may get this information by sending a postcard or letter to Family Plan, Time Life Insurance Company, San Antonio 8, Texas.

Services Ponder New Enlisted Titles And Insignia For E-8, E-9 Ranks

What devices will be used to denote the new enlisted grades E-8 and E-9? What will enlisted men picked for these ranks be called?

So far there is no official word on the subject but THE JOURNAL has learned that the use of stars on existing rank insignia appears to be a likely possibility.

Both the Army and the Air Force state unofficially that thought is being given to adding a single star in the space between the six stripes of master sergeants to indicate that a man is serving in pay-grade E-8.

Two stars would be inserted between the stripes to show E-9 status.

The stars probably will be made of the same material as the stripes.

For signature purposes Army and Air Force men serving in super enlisted grades may be authorized to sign their names: M/Sgt., E-8 and M/Sgt., E-9.

Consideration is also being given to the possible use of first sergeant and sergeant major designations.

Stars also are being considered by the Navy. It is probable that the present chief's insignia, which carries a special mark between the stripes, would be modified by placing either one or two white stars above the eagle. It is contemplated that Navy E-8's will be known as Senior Chief Petty Officers, and E-9's would be given the title Master Chief Petty Officer.

The Marine Corps is approaching problem from another tack. At present Leatherneck master sergeants wear stripes with a blank center; 1st sergeants wear six stripes with a centered diamond; and sergeants major wear stripes with a centered star.

The Corps is considering retaining diamond and star devices but straining the three bottom rockers. This was done before 1946 to denote technical specialties.

How to choose your policy.

TWENTY-PAY LIFE

If you want to buy Life Insurance and get it paid for in a period of time, this Twenty-Life Plan is for you.

You pay a little more each year than for Ordinary Life, but cash values develop faster—you don't pay premiums for rest of your life.

SPECIAL ORDINARY LIFE PLAN

The principal purpose of Special Ordinary Life Insurance is to provide the greatest amount of permanent protection at the lowest cost. This is the most popular form of life insurance. When you seek the best way to meet your own protection needs, consider this policy first. It provides life protection. The cost, spread over your lifetime, is less than other permanent insurance.

5 YEAR TERM PLAN

Five Year Term Insurance is the need of one who wants the greatest amount of protection for a limited time at the lowest cost. It's an ideal plan while income is relatively low but insurance needs are great. No one had this plan before World War II but many come to Ordinary Life, explained above.

Once your original application is approved, your policy may be renewed for additional five year periods, or converted to any type of insurance, regardless of your health at that time. (Payment of premium is required.) Both term and ordinary life insurance are issued in minimum amounts of $5,000. You may pay for as much as you want in amounts over $15,000, a cost your current physical is required. If you enter or leave service, there is NO CHANGE in cost.
